Friends of the Winslow Library Silent Auction

The Friends of the Winslow Library is having a Silent Auction for our Christmas Fund raiser in the form of gift baskets. If you saw the lovely and useful baskets last year you know what to expect. Some are already set up in the library with others to come. Last year I was the lucky winner of two baskets, one featured quilting items, yard goods, a book with quilting patterns, and just about everything needed to make a quilt; the other basket's theme was knitting and it had several skeins of yarn, knitting needles, book on making dishcloths and many other items. There were other baskets with homemade soap, homemade beauty products, bath time items, some homemade and some purchased. These are donated by local businesses and individuals. They make a lovely gift for a special person or that special person could be yourself! They are on display in the Winslow Library until December 13th at 3:00 at which time they will be moved to the Mercantile for those who have not seen them will have a chance to bid on them. Winning bidders will be announced after the parade downtown.

The December 2014 issue of Within Winslow will be the last printed copy distributed. I will continue with the paper and it will be found on line at www.winslowar.com as it is now and one copy in the Within Winslow book at the Library. The cost of the printed copy has just become too much for the Friends of the Library to continue this service.

Annual Christmas Parade

Dust off your Christmas Spirit, unpack your Santa Hat, dig out some warm clothes and head out for the Annual Winslow Christmas Parade. Mark your calendar for Saturday, December 13, 2014.

There will be Floats and old cars, horses and wagons, tractors, 4-wheelers, bicycles, fire trucks, and Santa. The Parade will come through downtown Winslow about 5:00 PM, go through town, turn around before you get to 71 and back through town disbursing at the City's Peek Park.

Last year the weather refused to cooperate and we had snow and ice every weekend, so this year we are looking forward to some good weather and a lovely time.

The Friends of the Winslow Library will be serving free Chili and Hot Chocolate or coffee inside the Mercantile beginning about 4:30 until it's gone.

For those interested in being in the parade call City Hall 479-634-3901 and reserve a spot. The motorized vehicles will line up starting about 4:00 in the parking lot by the Library. The non-motorized rigs will line up in the old gym parking lot at the same time.

The baskets from the Friend's of the Library Silent Auction will be on display at the Mercantile for any last minute bids. So if you bid on them in the Library and thought you had the winning bid be sure to check and make sure you haven't been outbid at the last minute. The winners of the basket auction will be announced after the parade.

The City Council will announce the winners of the various categories in the parade at City Hall following the parade. We hope to see everyone there.

Pick Up Personal Items

Over the past few years individuals and groups have left items at the library or in some of the rooms not being used. Everything is being cleaned out and the rooms will be closed off to cut down on heating costs. Please pick up any personal items you have there by December 1, 2014 or it will be disposed of.

The Winslow Museum had the honor of hosting two tours in the month of October. History students from John Brown University visited on October 12th. The group was able to visit the historic Methodist Church, learn some local history in the museum, take a trip out Sunset Road to view the Tim West property, and have a wonderful meal at Grandma's House Café. We always look forward to this group of students coming for a visit every year. They also made a generous monetary donation to the museum for which we are very grateful.

The next group to visit was the Washington County Historical Society from Fayetteville. We hosted a group of 40-45 people for a presentation at the museum with refreshments. The museum supplied maps of some of the more historic locations for a self-guided tour around Winslow. We are very thankful for the opportunity to host these tours.

The museum is in the process of creating a new display on the Roadside Cabin Courts of the area from the 1930's - 1960's. We are looking for any photographs, advertising, and stories from any of these businesses. We are especially interested in items from the Redbud Court built in 1941, which was located where D & S Body Shop is now. As well as, any information on Glen Eden which was located north of Winslow on Hwy 71.

As always, if anyone is interested in becoming involved with the museum please come and visit. We are open Mon-Fri from 9:00 AM - 3:00 PM and on Sat by appointment. Please call 634-3901.

Cuttin'

By Arlen Davidian

How many things have you "cut" in your life? Three? Four? Six hundred?

Oh, I'm not talking about cutting with the use of a knife or saw. I'm talking about cutting bits and pieces out of our lives and explaining those chips that fall away with catch phrases that are sometimes in fact just excuses.

We use idioms in this complex language we speak that often have little or no meaning in themselves. We drive hot cars in order to be cool. We borrow time to lend a hand to a friend. We mend broken friendships. When we're happy, we're flyin' high, and when we're depressed, we're down in the dumps. And, our kids drive us crazy.

Then there's this business of "cuttin'."

Have you ever cut classes? Was there ever a time when you cut capers, or cut a donut in the driveway? How about cuttin' corners or cuttin' the mustard or cuttin' across a field or cuttin' a line at the theatre. How about cuttin' a dashing figure at the party? Have you ever just cut out of the party because someone wouldn't cut out the nonsense? Maybe instead, you cut loose and cut to the chase to put that nitwit in his place. Then again, you might have just endured the intense air you could cut with a knife.

Maybe in desperation you told those kids that were driving you crazy to either fish or cut bait or you'd cut their allowance? Maybe in desperation you just finally shouted, "cut it out!"

Has your boss ever cut your work load. Or maybe instead did he cut your salary?

Yep, we've all done it. Er, well, I've got to take that back.

I met a woman by chance who had never cut a class, never let her kids drive her crazy, never had an intense word with a friend or her spouse. Yep, this was a perfect human being. At least perfect in the mirror into which she peeked in order to paint that perfect picture of herself.

Well, many years later, I chanced to meet her again. Her grand life had been cut to pieces. She has a broken marriage, two kids have had repeated run-ins with the law, one was in rehab for drug abuse and one is still in prison. But, I'm not writing this to criticize her, but to give each of us a little insight into the way each of us lives. I believe that I can safely say that we each have a skeleton of some sort in our closet. It most likely is not something serious, but there it lies, left in the darkness of our past to be forgotten.

So maybe in the grand picture of things we should just cut criticism out of our lives and lend a hand to someone in need. We'll likely cut new roads to a thriving friendship!

The Cavern

By D. Gesn

Indian culture, according to information within the cavern, wasn't too much different than the culture of men today. There was survival, a time to play, religious rituals, trade, farming, etc. Some folks were savage in nature, just like today. The main difference was that Indians helped each other. There were different classes within the tribe, but everyone worked together for any one purpose. With economy a disaster in today's arrangement, we do everything to cut each other's throat! History tells us that the Indians were savages, an adulterous people – so, what does this that make us today? When Custer slew innocent children, old men and women, he was a hero. When the "battle" was won, it was printed as a great "victory! When he was slain, the battle was printed as a "massacre" by savages. Imagine that! Hallelujah!

If I painted a certain scene on canvas, or on my car, from one painting in the cavern, people today might say it's pornographic. The Indians did not think of it that way. Man today, in America, finds and institutes fault with items that are not filthy yet only in his eyes. The painting is history, a way of life way back when! Go to Florence, Italy and view some nakedness. To some, even religious folks, this would be considered pornographic. What our society decides by our own concept of the way things should be doesn't necessarily mean that's the way it should be. Understand? Hallelujah!

Now, I'm not saying that the Indians had all the right ideas about different arrangements but we didn't exist in their time period. Even though one painting displays what seems to be an insight into the future, it is possible that it included ways or ideals of their present time zone.

Maybe some Indians had visions of the way things were to come or the way things should have been. To fly amongst the stars or things of that nature might have been purely imagination or some religious idea.

Personally I don't believe in UFO's, the Yeti, and mermaids, but I can't say don't exist. Legends and myths even superstition has some truth to it. Maybe just a tad, but none-the-less.

Prior to missionaries coming to America, the Indians recorded the coming of a Savior. What would constitute the idea of that? If they were paganistic, why even think of it? If they had no knowledge of any known religious concept of today, how could that be? Why would an Indian paint that on a wall? Where in the world did he ever get the notion that there was once some great flood that covered the earth? Hallelujah!

Not once have I ever read that a certain general ever came to Northwestern Arkansas, but I guess it's indeed possible. But why would he? The American Revolution might have attributed to his needs, an outlaw as such, but a hero, a French General at that! A lot of gold is down in there in what was the Sabine River in Louisiana. Maybe just maybe, the Indian of the past gave us more knowledge than what we give him credit for. Without a shadow of doubt, if this cavern is discovered by certain individuals acknowledgement of certain facts will be or may be hidden from the public. Man has a way of doing these things "for the good of the majority". Just like military secrets, there are things the common man must never know. To tell the truth, there's a lot out there I don't want to know! Hallelujah!

Several different eras appear in the cavern. You can tell that by different interpretations of different time zones. Tools and weaponry, and even the idea of travel is different in concept and design. The need to survive is displayed in different manners, religious and burial concepts are different. Then there are the strangers they met at different intervals. Animal structure tell of different intervals. Rivers and creek beds, the lay of the land is portrayed different within the murals; although gold elements seem to remain exact, even south of the area.

This discovery is surely a marvel beyond comprehension, at least concerning me and my little pea-sized brains or wave of thought. A mystery to me why it even exists! Would make for a good movie, would it not? You know I could see this existence in Arizona or New Mexico, maybe even California, but here in Northwestern Arkansas? Baffling to me- Hallelujah!

(Entering any cave is now against the law.)

Winslow 4-H Club News

By Sagely Burnett,

Winslow 4-H Secretary

On the bright sunny morning of Friday, October 24th, three Winslow 4-Her's took five Nigerian Dwarf does to Fayetteville. But, this wasn't a show... More like show-and-tell. Sagely, Sierra, and Sicily Burnett, along with their mother, 4-H main leader Shannon Burnett, participated in a workshop at Walker Stone House. This dairy goat workshop was held for adults who want to start milking, and raising Nigerian Dwarfs, who along with Pygmies are the only breed allowed to be kept inside the city limits of Fayetteville. There were fifteen people attending, and it was organized by Linda Coffey of Prairie Grove, AR.

The five Nigerians the 4-Her's brought were used for a hands-on learning experience. The girls and Mrs. Coffey showed the participants how to handle, and the actual size of these Dwarf goats. Some of the topics in this workshop were:

- Nutrition during lactation as well as when dry (not milking), hay quality showing examples of Bermuda, Alfalfa, Orchard grass.
- Breeding and gestation
- Kidding
- Vaccinations
- General care such as grooming, hoof trimming, udder care, and milking
- Deworming and basic idea of how to use FAMACHA system

My favorite part of this workshop was being able to share my knowledge of my goats with people new to this business. Learning from each others mistakes, helps us make less mistakes. I got to meet new people, and make connections that without workshops like this would be impossible.

Boston Mountain Fire Association

By Dewey Drummond

My name is Dewey Drummond. The Board of Directors of the Boston Mountain Fire Association recently appointed me as Fire Chief for the BMFA Department. I have been on the Fire Department since 2001. I have seen great growth and progress in the Department in that time. I hope to continue this growth and encourage a good relationship between the Department and the Communities it serves. We have some new Board Members and I'm looking forward to working with them. The Department belongs to the paid members of the Fire Association and these members are welcome to take part in the activities of the Association.

The Department now has four stations through out the district. I would like to add to add to this so our good ISO rating can be extended to the far reaches of our area. I would like to become better acquainted with the Winslow City Council and attend some of their meetings to promote a good relationship between the City and the Fire Department. I feel we need the help of the entire district to make a good Department.

Boston Mountain Fire Association will have a Semi-Annual meeting on November 13, 2014 at 7:00 prior to the regular meeting. All members are encouraged to attend.

Burning Wood

Submitted By J. Williams

I Moved to the mountains not knowing anything about wood burning devices, less about what wood to use, and nothing about maintenance.

First thing is the difference between a fireplace and a wood burning stove. You have to be seasoned to cook for either. No pun intended. Don't try either without advice from a native. Your house will get smokey, food will burn or not even get started cooking. That's when you learn about the damper. None of them are the same. Some you pull, some you twist, and mine you kick. Dampers are another story. A true art.

Now the wood really threw me too. Pine is a no no, starts well, but makes chimneys full of hazards that make volunteer firemen giggle as they hose you down. Sweet gum will burn real slow but needs to cure for six months. It makes good boats for your enemy's; won't float well if green. Oak, hickory, cherry and all hard wood were found best. Water oak from the river area smells really bad. Stinks!

Maintenance on stoves/chimneys were my next fiasco. Like don't clean out ashes and put them in a plastic bucket, use metal. Ashes sometimes have live coals and makes plastic buckets sag, fall apart, and leave plastic streams out the door. Leave marks on the floor making the wife upset.

Chimney sweeping should be left to professionals because I asked around on chimney sweeping. One guy said take a logging chain and flail the sides chimney until clean. Another person said he wrapped burlap sacks around a pole and brush into a number 2 wash tub like a giant Qtip. Then having two chicken, drop one on a rope in the hole and they will flog the sides. Use the last chicken to check the job for cleanup.

Maybe I will survive this year if folks at the store will quit laughing and pointing me out.

So, You Like Blue?

By Arlen Davidian

Why would some say that a guy's chartreuse slacks and orange shirt is a putrid color combination? Or who's to say a woman's yellow dress with those pink polka dots shows she has horrid taste?

It's simple. WE know better!

Yep! Let's face it, as mature individuals it's up to us to let the world know how to dress, the color of our cars, and even how to paint our fingernails so they match the scheme.

Is there a question here that has no answer? What really is the best and worst choice of colors? Is it really even important?

Well, I don't think I have to answer that last question. Color in a vast array of tones and shades surround us. Look at the clothing industry. We spend billions of dollars and take years out of our lives trying to decide what colors we are going combine in our outfits when we go to the mall or show up at a party. Putting on the right tie is no longer displayed with that old stand-by, a white dress shirt in the background. White shirts, so long a standard are often replaced with everything from black to varying shades of every color and design pouring from the minds of designers and manufacturers.

How can an artist make the foam green of an ocean white-cap with the sun shining through come alive with a brush, a pallet and paint. All color is derived from the three primary colors, red, blue and yellow. When mixed with the trained eye of an artist, those colors can put life into a rose or a puppy snuggled in a child's lap.

I went to the internet to discover what the most common color in the universe might be. The unofficial consensus was black. Black? That's not even a color. It's the lack of color, or is it. Color is the reflection of light bouncing off or passing through an object or substance. If you mix blue and yellow, the light reflected back is green. Mix red and blue you get purple. My favorite, "Puce." Puce? What an ugly name for a strange color, a dark brownish purple. I had a friend who was determined to get the best suntan in the neighborhood. And guess what I named him? You got it...., "Sir Puce!"

From early childhood we acquire a favorite color. Is that because of the way Mom dressed us or decorated the kitchen? Was that passed on by her likings or is it in our personal DNA?

When I was very young, my Dad was in school and struggling to support my mother and four sons. One day he came home with two pairs of brand new pure wool socks. I can still see those colors that I thought were gorgeous. My pair had a deep blue background with delicate red and white threads woven in. Well, they WERE gorgeous when they were new. And they were a perfect fit. The problem was they never wore out. The tops became loose and the toes wadded up in my shoes. But when they were washed they shrank up so small I had trouble pulling them on. By the end of the day they were all stretched out and the tops sagged down over my shoes and the wadded up toes wore blisters on my feet. I can still see those things with the vivid colors that I came to hate and have often wondered who is still wearing them today because I know they won't ever wear out.

Colors are really only a perception of the way we each translate the mixtures of just those three primary colors. To expand those primary colors, nature has given us the rainbow, an array of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. That is the entire spectrum of the color of white light coming from the sun. It is what we see when we "bend" light by passing it through a substance such as water droplets or a glass prism.

All this doesn't explain why you might prefer a red car, your son or daughter wants blue and I might recommend green. Clothing designers, house painters, toy manufacturers know that colors are a critical part of the process of capturing the interest of a buyer. A car salesman told me that men kick the tires, open the hood, ask about the engine, the mileage, the transmission, and check out the seats. Women? He claims they choose that car because they like the color.

So who's right about the colors we choose? Can we define the "why" of our preference?

Frankly, I haven't the faintest idea how all this works. The house a friend saw while driving through a small town in Alabama might give us an insight into it all. This house was painted with chartreuse siding, a bright red door, purple shutters, teal blue window trim, yellow gutters and a bright blue garage door. On the lawn was a sign;

"I DON'T LIKE THE COLOR OF YOUR HOUSE EITHER."

Thanksgiving

If not but for a moment, let us share with another the gift of love. Any expression of love for family, friends, or even strangers, always differ, yet is a necessity of man. The season of Thanksgiving is once again upon us, and touches each of us in a different manner. A mother, grandmother - their hands dancing upon the counter top in a continuous motion of energy of good-hearted impulsiveness and love of life. A multitude of folks await the savory cuisine they prepare. Children glowing in anticipation of the fun that holidays present. Dad's deciding the best way to carve the turkey. No act of love has to be analyzed, it happens as natural phenomena; sometimes explainable sometimes not. Each positive energy proclaimed is a love in its own right. Thanksgiving is communication and this in itself is love for another that needs no explanation. I know it not to be but only in one's heart that love can be shared, if not but for the moment...

YOU THINK ABOUT THAT

Matthew 6:9 thru 13 After this manner therefore pray ye:

Our Father who art in Heaven you are holy, I honor you, you are most sacred, you have my heartfelt respect, reverence, worship and I ask for your goodwill. I request your spiritual sovereignty. I ask that you rule, reign, have total authority and your will be done in my life as the plan you made for me in Heaven. Provide my needs today. Forgive me as I forgive others. Lead me not into temptation and deliver me from evil. I submit my life to your sovereign rule, possession, authority, control and give you magnificent adoring praise, honor and worshipful thanksgiving forever, amen.

What? That's not what it says. Okay, what about this: My Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be your name. Your Kingdom come your will be done in my Life as it is in Heaven. Provide my needs today. Forgive me as I forgive others. Lead me not into Temptation. Deliver me from Evil. For Thine is the Kingdom. And the Power. And the Glory Forever. Amen

No, that's not exactly what it says either. Okay challenge #1. First, let me say, it is not my intention to insult anybody's intelligence of understanding the meaning and definition of words. I am sharing more my not understanding the meaning and definition of words until I looked them up in the dictionary and "drilled" down in the definitions and got a major awakening and understanding of the power in this prayer. Those words are "Hallowed" "Kingdom" "Power" and "Glory". Get you dictionary, online, or the old time version. Look up the definition of those four words. Drill down in those definitions. Then decide if my first version doesn't illuminate this prayer to a personal conversation with the Father in Heaven. Is there anything in your life that is not covered by this prayer? The second version means the same thing. Just makes it easy to remember and say every day. I believe "give us this day our daily bread," means say it every day. Challenge #2. Say it every day for 30 days. Absolute "Faith" which I will discuss later is the fuel that brings this prayer alive in your life and gives you piece of mind. Happiness Is Peace Of Mind. I'm Wesley Wood, YOU THINK ABOUT THAT!

Next month will continue discussing the power and importance of this prayer.

From One Dandelion To Another

Submitted By J. Williams

Having four visiting family members, my wife was very busy, so I offered to go to the store for her to get some needed items, which included light bulbs, paper towels, trash bags, detergent and Clorox. So off I went.

I scurried around the store, gathered up my goodies and headed for the checkout counter, only to be blocked in the narrow aisle by a young man who appeared to be about sixteen-years-old. I wasn't in a hurry, so I patiently waited for the boy to realize that I was there. This was when he waved his hands excitedly in the air and declared in a loud voice, "Mommy, I'm over here."

It was obvious now, he was mentally challenged and also startled as he turned and saw me standing so close to him, waiting to squeeze by. His eyes widened and surprise exploded on his face as I said, "Hey Buddy, what's your name?"

"My name is Denny and I'm shopping with my mother," he responded proudly.

"Wow," I said, "that's a cool name; I wish my name was Denny, but my name is Steve."

"Steve, like Stevarino?" he asked.

"Yes," I answered. "How old are you Denny?"

"How old am I now, Mommy?" he asked his mother as she slowly came over from the next aisle.

"You're fifteen-years-old Denny; now be a good boy and let the man pass by."

I acknowledged her and continued to talk to Denny for several more minutes about summer, bicycles and school. I watched his brown eyes dance with excitement, because he was the center of someone's attention. He then abruptly turned and headed toward the toy section.

Denny's mom had a puzzled look on her face and thanked me for taking the time to talk with her son. She told me that most people wouldn't even look at him, much less talk to him. I told her that it was my pleasure and then I said something I have no idea where it came from, other than by the prompting of the Holy Spirit. I told her that there are plenty of red, yellow, and pink roses in God's Garden; however, "Blue Roses" are very rare and should be appreciated for their beauty and distinctiveness. You see, Denny is a Blue Rose and if someone doesn't stop and smell that rose with their heart and touch that rose with their kindness, then they've missed a blessing from God.

She was silent for a second, then with a tear in her eye she asked, "Who are you?"

Without thinking I said, "Oh, I'm probably just a dandelion, but I sure love living in God's garden."

She reached out, squeezed my hand and said, "God bless you!" and then I had tears in my eyes.

May I suggest, the next time you see a BLUE ROSE, don't turn your head and walk off. Take the time to smile and say Hello. Why? Because, by the grace of GOD, this mother or father could be you. This could be your child, grandchild, niece or nephew. What a difference a moment can mean to that person or their family.

From an old dandelion... Live simply; Love generously; Care deeply; Speak kindly; and, Leave the rest to God.

If this story blesses you today please consider sharing it with others.

"People will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel."
