Many thanks to Amanda Banks, Ron Scoville, Michelle Bromley, Edward Montgomery, Brandon Banks, Liz Donahue, Beth Ashbaugh, LuAnne Center, Pam Center, Iris Bromley, Mary Bromley, JoAnn Kyle, and Leta McGuire. A very special thanks to Stew Kyle and M. E. Farris for their wonderful "Ballad of Maud Duncan". We hope to continue with more dramas in the future.

The Winslow Museum is working on a special project at this time called "Still Standing: Vernacular Structures of the Arkansas Ozarks". This will be a compilation of photographs by Chris Engholm and stories by Beverly Simpson to be exhibited at museums and galleries around the state. The opening will be at the Neil Compton Gallery in the spring of 2016. Following this will be an exhibit at the Winslow Museum and Ozark Folkways as well as several other locations. This is a wonderful opportunity to bring awareness to so many of the historic structures that we are in danger of losing. At this time, we are photographing in Washington, Crawford, Franklin, and Madison Counties. If anyone has a structure on their property that should be included in this exhibit, please contact the museum at 634-3901.

Velda's Words

By Velda Brotherton

My husband Don came home this week. He passed away October 18, and according to his wishes, was cremated. Monday we picked up his ashes and carried them home in a cedar box made by a local craftsman. For the six months he was in long term care, he asked to come home almost daily. I wish he could have done it some other way. Right now he is in his room, a sunny corner place with windows on the east and south. We will decide where he will rest forever after the party.

He was very firm about not having a funeral, not wanting people to stare at his remains, all laid out and formal. Those who knew him know he wasn't a formal person. He never tucked in his shirt, hated to comb his hair and in his later years refused to wear his teeth. He enjoyed teasing people, especially women, who were his best friends. That beautiful cedar box says more about him than any silk-lined casket ever could. And so we will have that requested party as soon as the family can gather at the same time. Everyone he knew will be invited, as well as those who know the family members.

In December we would have been married 62 years. True, some of them were bumpy indeed, but we both were stubborn enough to hang in there, anticipating better times. And those times came. After he retired, we traveled together. Both of us loved the west, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Utah. We stood in awe of the Grand Canyon, the painted desert, the Rocky mountains. We visited places like Monument Valley, ghost towns like Virginia City, mining towns, the high desert and big sky country. Always driving to see every inch we could.

It would be fine indeed if his celebration of life could be held near our 62nd anniversary on December 19, and it is planned for that month, but probably earlier than that. It has always been difficult to separate our anniversary celebration from Christmas get-togethers, so often they were held at the same time. Our family is big on birthdays, anniversaries, and holidays, especially Christmas.

For now, I'm at peace. I have brought him home where he wanted to be. May he rest in peace as well.

Those Bus Drivers! Who Needs 'Em?

By Arlen Davidian

The simple answer? We All Do!

Those bus drivers are the bulwarks between our children and the dangers that lurk in the world in which we live. They have pledged to keep them safe from the time they step through that door and take a seat until they step out onto the pavement or gravel or just raw dirt of the highways and back roads that lace our communities together. They are theirs until they jump into the arms of the waiting parents.

Oh, I've been in a hurry to get somewhere and took my place eighteen cars behind a bus in MY lane with its red lights flashing. I have to admit that I was just a little irritated on several occasions, but like the other seventeen drivers, I endured the delay.

Then not long ago, I arrived as the second car stuck behind one of those yellow impediments to my line of travel. As I sat waiting for the bus to move, I realized that the bit of disquietude was really generated by a fabricated sense of being in a hurry. I really didn't have a schedule to meet and there was no one waiting for my prescribed time of arrival. My wife knew I was on my way and would be there when I got there!

When I arrived back at my office I began to ruminate over those very few minutes and asked myself, "What really spawned that shard of unjustified angst?"

I turned over the events of those few minutes and began to savor what had really transpired. I thought about the little girl who jumped to the ground then disappeared in front of the bus. When she appeared on the other side she raced without a care across the pavement and flung her back pack into the waiting arms of her mother. I pondered the sense of what a ditz I had been all those times I had gotten "stuck" behind a school bus. How many great scenes about life in this community had passed me by? That precious cargo that had caused me a spark of pique might be the foundation of a story about those destined to be the building blocks of this great nation.

I drove school buses for several years when in college. I thought back on the tremendous responsibility that settles on the shoulders of each driver as they take charge of their machine for the next few hours. As parents we have taken on the care of our own children. Those drivers have suddenly become the caretakers of the children of dozens of families who have with little thought handed their precious children into the custody of men and women who have taken on this responsibility.

As I leaned back in my chair, I thought about the crosswalk attendant at a school I passed twice each day on my route. He was an older man, who in spite of a twisted back and a painful limp on a bent knee, gave me a huge grin and waved each day when I pulled up. He knew the names of many of the children. I saw him wipe the tears from a little boy's face and pull a bandage from his pocket to patch up his skinned elbow. I can still see the grin that pushed his face into a mass of wrinkles as he bent down to take a bright red apple from the hand of a little girl. He was a fixed part of the scene as he raised his stop sign a thousand times and stepped into the street promising those kids safe passage to the other side.

It was just another day when I arrived back at my home. I can to this day recall the sense of horror when I turned on my radio to listen to the news.

A sixteen year old, angered when his girlfriend told him it was over, jumped into his high powered Mustang and spun broadside into the street. The terrified crosswalk attendant shoved several children to the sidewalk as he watched the dreadful scene unfold. As he lay stunned on the hard concrete, he screamed as the Mustang slammed into the crowd of children he couldn't drag to safety.

When the ambulances arrived, the crosswalk attendant was sobbing, curled up in a fetal position cradling several children in his arms. Five children were dead and three badly injured. The attendant was gently placed in an ambulance and taken to a home for the elderly where the grief soon took his life.

I don't need to repeat the question I asked at the beginning. Each day millions of OUR children are placed in the hands of these noble guardians that take them into their custody. They don't ask for much. They are paid just a nominal fee for their service. Most are not full time employees who pay for their own insurance. They are men and women who have obligated a scheduled time twice a day to spend several hours caring for our children.

Those drivers are ordinary men and women who deserve our thanks when we get "caught" behind their bus.

"The Cavern"

D. Gesn ©2015

A square of grass, a three foot square, marks the spot. A grass that "does not belong". The dirt beneath must be loosened, and then the opening will be exposed. The entrance is at an angle, and must be traveled cautiously. If one reaches the arrow, he or she travels the wrong direction. The rock of massive weight has covered the second entrance, and is inaccessible. In a "pool" not far away, did the children once swim. The cat wandered, and the bear remains; the hog has been seen. The schoolhouse remains, and the dead tell no lies. Permission to search may be needed, yet – only to cross. The "snake" – it does so wander; the floods have changed its course of travel.

The logs are still cut and the "sang", it does so flourish. The scent of the "tea to be", remains in sight.....

The Cavern Chapter 19

D. Gesn © 2014

Thus we entered an old dimension of serious thought and an awareness of man, we had never experienced. Once upon a time, explorers combed these mountains in search of treasure and met men of colour. In areas nearby, the axe and maul, the pick and shovel, the antler – all created a new atmosphere amongst old inhabitants. As within the Ouachita's, man penetrated these vast foothills of the Ozarks. The Indian culture knew of the obligations he made to his surroundings and respected the land and its resources. Foreigners swept the land with fierceness with disregard to the Indian culture and its reverence. These people housed their treasures for future profits with no true organized vision of the future.

Erosion of the soil continues even as I write, as it did in the past. Though I am not the true environmentalist of today, it is not difficult to see the dangers we face for the future. The Indian Culture of yesteryear foresaw the shrinking of his culture as time marched on. The buffalo almost totally depleted, streams turned into dust, the spirit of a great people denounced. Material possessions we appreciate the most when we find ourselves facing economic woes, yet- our surroundings we depend on, our necessities to sustain life are also most appreciated when we find ourselves in danger of losing them. The cavern and its surroundings require the integrity of man with insight and wisdom by his side.

The cavern promotes generosity of knowledge from past mistakes made by both foreigners and Indian. All of us in the group had the satisfaction of witnessing the past come alive. The non-discipline of the cultures of the past made us more understand our surroundings of the present. Removing any artifacts must be a professional approach. People that exploit treasure exist merely for the moment. To impress others by the materialistic possessions is their life. Most never see past the end of his own nose, and are a legend in their own mind. become extinct. A bat can eat up to 25,000 mosquitoes in one night! Our economic woes will always be a part of man, but our necessities such as water and air, the food we sustain, the animals and species it takes to make the world go around in an organized fashion, could disappear in time. Time is not always on our side. The past, present, and future are different entities, yet present themselves as a whole. Anything and everything that we depend on in this life, proves that we are all linked together in an organized fashion. Mathematicians and scientists will spend a lifetime attempting to prove such a thing by equations – yet, never having enough common sense and insight to realize it without a computer or slide rule.

Cochise once remarked, "That by man's greed shall he destroy himself, and the land of all our peoples will be forgotten". Murals depict that effort. History has a way of repeating itself over and over. Man is the creature that decides any positive or negative aspect of life.

In the 1500's the Spanish explored the hills of Arkansas for rich deposits of gold, only to be disappointed. Men, for the last four hundred years have searched with minute results. So, the experts have thus decided in a proclamation that no great deposits exist in the state. Maybe, just maybe, only by accident shall man find the motherlode of such an existence – maybe. What may seem to be totally illogical, may actually be a reason for it to be there in an existence where by all reasoning known to man, it should not be there!

How many new species do we encounter today, in the oceans of the world, that we never knew existed? We search the stars for extraterrestrials and knowledge of the past, present, and future. Yet how much knowledge is hidden right under our feet, at any given moment?

Thanksgiving Day

By David Gesn©2015

Life itself is a joy if we make the right use of it. Happiness is complete if we learn how to recognize the source from which it flows. We are united with those we love; with friends and family whose companionship we enjoy, a symbolic gesture of kindness and a ceremony of toil and intent. What an honorable occasion!

Thanksgiving Day is but one day of communication in a positive direction. We are addicted to not only the food that is presented, but also the love that surrounds us. It is the comfort and inspiration we so need. It gives us some type of hope when much of our lives we believe hope is merely a paradox of negativity. Indirectly, it allows us to have faith in something greater than ourselves.

Sadness shall always be, for like happiness both are elements of reality. What we shall allow is strictly up to each of us. Both, as we do so realize, are but experiences of life. It is at times we must experience the negative to appreciate the positive. Thanksgiving Day shall continue whether we are happy or not. It will only be profitable if we choose the wisdom instilled in our heart that tells us what the difference is, and what indeed we shall consume.

This day we can conquer sadness. We can give of ourselves because we want to, not because we have to. On this most special day we do not need that "proverbial pat on the back". Someone else will give us the honor and thanks so many of us often seek. By others shall we so smile. HAPPY THANKSGIVING!  Winslow Community Center Association

YOU THINK ABOUT THAT

By Wesley Wood 479-466-0681 wesretired@cox.net

"Give us this day our daily bread."

Luke 11: 1 And it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

Luke 11: 2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom Come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven

Mathew 6: 9 quotes him as saying "After this manner therefore pray ye".

Neither of these Disciples quotes Jesus as saying "This is how I pray". Instead they quote him as saying "This how you pray". This begs the question; how did this get to be called "The Lord's Prayer". Jesus didn't say "This is How I Pray, he said "this is How You Pray. This is your Prayer.

I'm going to break it down in the next few months and see if we can understand just how powerful this prayer really is.

" Give us this day our daily bread " The words "daily bread" is a general phrase referring to each individual's needs for the day and the deeper meaning is we should be saying this prayer every day. Jesus goes in to great detail in this chapter teaching us the Father already knows our needs even before we ask. You have the freedom to choose if you want the Father to supply your needs today or do it yourself. Somehow over the last four hundred years the Church has gotten away from the idea of Father knowing best and now everyone seems to think they know what they need and if they ask they will receive. And we wonder why our lives are so stressful and so much unrest and division in Families, Churches, and Our Nation. As for me I am putting my faith in to action and although I don't know, I believe when I ask him to supply my needs today that is exactly what he is doing. And though I don't like everything I have indescribable great inter peace of mind, joy and happiness. Happiness is Peace of Mind.

When you say this prayer "Our Father which art in heaven" "Hallowed be thy name" "Thy Kingdom Come" "Thy will be done in my life, as it is in heaven" "Provide my needs today" you are acknowledging the Father, Worshiping in the truest form of worship, committing and submitting your life to the authority and will of God by his infinite Wisdom and Knowledge to work his plan and provide your needs for your life. My Faith is; He knows our tomorrow better than we know our yesterday.

THE WORLD IS MINE

Author Unknown

Today, upon a bus, I saw a very beautiful woman and wished I were as beautiful. When suddenly she rose to leave, I saw her hobble down the aisle. She had one leg and used a crutch but as she passed, she passed a smile. Oh, God, forgive me when I whine. I have two legs; the world is mine.

> I stopped to buy some candy; the lad who sold it had such charm. I talked with him, he seemed so glad. If I were late, it'd do no harm. And as I left, he said to me, "I thank you, you've been so kind. It's nice to talk with folks like you. You see," he said, "I'm blind." Oh, God, forgive me when I whine. I have two eyes; the world is mine.

Later while walking down the street, I saw a child I knew. He stood and watched the others play, but he did not know what to do. I stopped a moment and then I said, "Why don't you join them dear?" He looked ahead without a word. I forgot, he couldn't hear. Oh, God, forgive me when I whine. I have two ears; the world is mine.

With feet to take me where I'd go; with eyes to see the sunset's glow; with ears to hear what I'd know; Oh, God, forgive me when I whine; I've been blessed indeed, the world is mine.

If this poem makes you feel thankful, just pass it along to your friends.

After all, it's just a simple reminder that we have so much to be thankful for!

Give the gift of love. It never comes back empty!
